

Men's Center Sustainability Projects

The Men's Center is bursting with life. In addition to the 29 clients who call the center home, the center is also home to 7 cows, 15 pigs, 87 chickens, 1500 fish, and hundreds of trees—mango, lime, papaya, and coconut. All of these animals and crops are part of the Men's Center sustainability program.

Pastor Mab and his team at the Men's Center have taken full control of these projects. In the past, our director Vuth in Phnom Penh was more closely involved, but he has empowered the staff to manage the projects. Vuth's role now is to check in monthly and to encourage the staff and help solve problems. In February, Vuth entrusted Pastor

Mab with $1,000 to buy supplies to run the programs, and in just three months, Pastor Mab and his team generated $1,063.85 of profit which was used to defray the costs of operating the Men's Center.

Much of this profit has come from the pig raising program. The Men's Center staff used to sell the piglets soon after they were born, but the staff found that they could make a greater profit if they raised the pigs and sold them for meat. Seeing the success of this program, they renovated the chicken coop (pictured below) and began raising chickens too.

These programs not only create additional funds for the center, but they also provide a great vocational training opportunity for some of the clients who are interested in agriculture.

Testimony

“Teen Challenge helped me a lot. They taught me to know Jesus Christ, and they helped me to stop using drugs, cigarettes, and alcohol. Teen Challenge provided me with a good place to stay and gave me love. I received care from staff here at the center. When I finish, I promise that I will be a good woman, hardworking, and not return to using drugs. Thanks be to God! ” Peurn (female), age 33

Peurn’s parents divorced when she was young. Then, when she was just 14 years old, a man promised her a job in Phnom Penh. However, he was a human trafficker and brought her to work in a distant part of the country. She was in this abusive situation for several years before her mom was able to track her down and bring her home.

Peurn didn’t stay home for long. Scarred by her previous experiences, she ran away to Phnom Penh and spent a decade living on the streets. She stayed with various men and begged for money so she could buy alcohol, cigarettes and drugs.

Peurn was referred by one of Teen Challenge’s partners, and through the one-year rehabilitation program, she stopped using drugs and alcohol. She’s now living with her younger sister and has a job working with a French organization.
